

Gatepost Partners is building a regional residential and commercial pest control company across North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, and Tennessee. It starts with one founding business with $500 thousand to $3 million of EBITDA, then grows as neighboring operators join as partners. Owners receive cash at closing, roll equity into the combined company as partners, and keep their name on the truck and their crew on the routes. Our equity is committed before a letter of intent is signed.

THE THESIS

- An essential service. Homes and businesses need pest control in good years and lean ones.
- Relationships that recur. Customers stay on a regular plan with a technician they know.
- Owner-led and local. Many strong family companies have grown as far as word of mouth will take them.
- Density pays. More stops on the same streets lifts technician productivity at nearly the same cost.
- A growing region. Raleigh–Durham, coastal Carolina, Richmond, and Tennessee suburbs keep adding households.

ABOUT OUR FOUNDER

Chris Kern founded Gatepost Partners to build a pest control platform alongside the owners who join it. He runs a residential water treatment business, which taught him what a small service company depends on: a technician who shows up, a phone someone answers, and route density. Before that, he spent a handful of years at a lower middle market private equity firm on platform buyouts and add-on acquisitions of founder and family-owned companies, running diligence and financing through closing and working with management teams on budgets, KPIs, and integration. Chris is an MBA candidate at The Wharton School, holds a B.S. in Finance from Florida State University, and plans to move to the market and run the platform day to day.
